The Kunsthalle of the Hypo Cultural Foundation is presenting the Danish artist Vilhelm Hammershøi (1864-1916) for the first time in Munich. With more than 100 outstanding works, this retrospective not only offers an overview of his entire creative output, it also places this painter of silence and light in the context of his European contemporaries around 1900.

In recent years, shows in Paris, London, Hamburg, New York and Tokyo have established Hammershøi as the most important Danish artist of the second half of the nineteenth century. Over 30 carefully selected paintings by artists such as Fantin-Latour, Matisse, Munch, Seurat and Whistler position the Dane in an international context. Hammershøi has traditionally been viewed as a unique figure in Danish art – a monumental presence, overshadowing his contemporaries and seeking his equal both nationally and internationally. This exhibition seeks to broaden this narrow perspective.

The BMW Museum sees itself as a “traffic complex”. Visitors are guided along a route extending some 1,000 metres, passing buildings, rooms and plazas. The exhibition is theme-based rather than chronologically structured, allowing the highlighting of developments through various areas such as design, engines and motor sport.

The BMW Museum was opened in 1973 as one of the first brand museums; in 2008 it was redesigned and extended. In conjunction with the BMW production plant and BMW Welt, it constitutes the “brand experience” in Munich. This is where the company’s past, present and future come together.
